FIA ORGANIZES ITS 3RD EDITION OF SOUP KITCHEN

The Federation of Indian Associations organized its third edition of "Diwali Soup Kitchen-Spreading Lights of Happiness" in Trenton, New Jersey, under the leadership of FIA Women Committee Chair and Joint. Secretary Smita Miki Patel, along with the FIA team. Nearly 1,000 meals were served during this direct outreach effort by the FIA women's team. Smita Miki Patel stated, "I am proud to serve in this very selfless cause of curbing hunger in our communities. All of our women volunteers have not just brought the meals, but they have packed them, added additional items such as sweets and if we ran out of sweets, we added cookies to make sure a full wholesome meal is served complimentary and by doing that, we are spreading the happiness and joy that is brought by the festival of lights, Diwali, to millions of Hindus, Sikhs, Jains and Buddhists across the world. It has been my honor to lead and serve this selfless initiative by FIA along with the executive team and the board", she said.

Diwali Soup Kitchen was initiated two years ago during the COVID-19 pandemic in order to offer free meals to tri-state soup kitchens that were in need at the time to cope with the elevated demands. FIA's association with the Salvation Army and other official soup kitchens was to work towards curbing hunger in our communities.

Through its annual Diwali Soup Kitchen Drive, FIA is continuing to work towards the goal of serving 10,000 meals during this year's holiday season. FIA will partner with Jaipur Foot USA Prem Bhandari, AIA-NY Harish Thakkar and AIANA Sunil Nayak for its next round of Soup Kitchen, which will occur this holiday season.

India Should Decrease its Dependence on Russia: US

The US has stated that India should lessen its reliance on Russia and reiterated that the US is committed to working with India on its transition away from Russia.

Responding to a query on India becoming Russia's largest oil customer after China and expansion of their trade ties, US State Department Spokesperson, Ned Price said, "Russia isn't a reliable source of energy and security assistance. It's not only in the interest of Ukraine or of the region, India decreases its dependence on Russia over time, but it's also in India's own bilateral interest, given what we've seen from Russia."

"We have been intentional about exempting the oil and gas - energy sector - from sanctions imposed on Russia. The fact that India continues to seek oil and other forms of energy from Russia - isn't something that runs afoul of sanctions that have been imposed," he added.

Meanwhile, Price also reiterated that the US is committed to helping India in its transition away from Russia. The US has consistently made the point that it is a relationship that developed and was cemented over the course of decades.

"When it comes to Russia's - India's relationship with Russia, we've consistently made the point that it's a relationship that developed and was cemented over the course of decades, really came to be during the Cold War at a time when the United States was not in a position to be an economic partner, a security partner, a military partner to India."

Aruna Miller Becomes First Indian-American to be Maryland Lt. Governor

On November 8, Aruna Miller made history by becoming the first Indian-American politician to win the race for Lieutenant Governor in the state of Maryland.

Miller, 58, a former delegate to the Maryland House, was on the Lieutenant Governor ticket along with Wes Moore -- the Democratic Governor elect.

Soon after the polling closed on Tuesday evening, Moore and Miller were declared elected against their Republican challengers.

Both President Joe Biden and Vice President Kamala Harris had campaigned in favour of Moore and Miller.

"Maryland, tonight you showed the nation what a small but mighty state can do when democracy is on the ballot. You chose unity over division, expanding rights over restricting rights, and hope over fear. You chose Wes Moore and me to be your next Governor and Lieutenant Governor," Miller said in her victory speech.

"Ever since I came to this country in 1972, I've never stopped being excited for the promise of America. I will never stop fighting to make sure that promise is available to everyone. And this promise begins with a commitment to deliver a Maryland where we leave no one behind," she said.

UK Court Rejects Nirav Modi's Appeal Against Extradition to India

India praised a British court decision on November 10 dismissing the appeal filed by fugitive diamondaire Nirav Modi to avoid being extradited to India in connection with a bank loan fraud case.

"We welcome the UK high court's decision to dismiss the appeal against extradition of Nirav Modi," Ministry of External Affairs Spokesperson Arindam Bagchi said.

"We will continue with our efforts to get Nirav Modi back, as well as other economic offenders so that they are brought to justice," he said.

The spokesperson said India has been vigorously pursuing the extradition of economic fugitives so that they face the legal process in the country.

"Pulling these various strands together and weighing them in the balance so as to reach an overall evaluative judgment on the question raised by Section 91, we are far from satisfied that Mr. Modi's mental condition and the risk of suicide are such that it would be either unjust or oppressive to extradite him," states the ruling.

Indian-American Computer Science Professor bags Amazon Research Award

Professor of Computer Science at Kansas State University Pavithra Prabhakar received the Amazon Research Award to research how to minimize negative user experiences.

According to a 1, 2022, press release from KSU, Prabhakar, who is the Peggy and Gary Edwards chair in engineering, received the award to design a tool that highlights changes between different versions of machine learning software systems with the goal of reducing negative experiences by users.

Prabhakar is currently on sabbatical from KSU to be a program director at the National Science Foundation. She was one of 74 recipients of the awards from Amazon, which also includes an unrestricted gift, access to more than 300 Amazon public datasets, and Amazon Web Services' artificial intelligence and machine learning services and tools, the press release said.

"The broad objective of the project is to automatically characterize how much two versions of machine learning-based systems are similar or different," Prabhakar is quoted saying in the KSU press release. "These systems are regularly retrained to achieve superior performance; however, this does not often translate to a better user experience," she said, adding, "This can be mitigated by equipping the design team with an automated tool that could highlight where and by how much the systems changed between different versions, thereby aiding the team in making decisions regarding the acceptability of the changes from a user experience perspective."

SIMPLISTIC, MINIMALISTIC AND RUSTIC... WHAT SETS APART THIS HORROR!

Director Emir Ezwan

Cast Farah Ahmad, Mhia Farhana, Harith Haziq, Namron, June Lojong, Putri Qaseh

A poor widowed woman lives in the middle of a forest with her two kids, leading a lonely, bare-bones life.

When they take in a seemingly lost, bedraggled, mysterious young girl roaming in the forest, they have no idea they are bringing a bad omen upon their life.

I chanced upon this wonderful film in the Asian Horrors section of Netflix. I must use this opportunity to express my admiration for the algorithms and classifications of this platform. The sheer range of their catalogues, their suggestions and the way they pick up your preferences is unmatched.

What caught my fancy in the trailer was the rustic setting. I have observed that period and country settings work very well in this genre. It is an element on its own that adds mystique.

This film, which won quite a few accolades at the Malaysian Film Festival, is one of the most simplistic horror films that I have ever watched. With minimum elements, they have been able to create excellent atmospherics that probably set apart this film.

Analysis

It is a fantastic debut film by Emir Ezwan. The screenplay is definitely the star here. What's even more interesting is the shoe-string budget it was made on.

There's a relentless foreboding feeling throughout, even during the daytime picturization, and that is something I consider a commendable virtue in horror. There's also an intrigue factor that holds throughout, and they even manage to throw in a twist towards the end.

Even though there seems to be an element of the occult, it avoids usual tropes, jump scares, contorted faces, special effects or VFX. His story telling brings in the desired effect and it does that well.

Emir has also been able to successfully create an empathetic bond with the family even without using any dramatics. To enable that, I would say that the three titular actors have done a fine job. I was quite impressed with the natural and realistic performance by Farah Ahmad, who plays the mom.

I could confidently say it is a must-watch for horror fans. The craft of the film maker is sheer pleasure and worth appreciation.

LOVING ADULTS

(Danish / Thriller / Netflix)

INFIDELITY, HATRED, MURDER AND TWISTS IS A GOOD MIX FOR A THRILLER!

Director Barbara Rothenborg

Cast Sonja Richter, Dar Salim, Sus Wilkins, Mikael Birkkjær

The film starts with pearls like

“Almost all murders have something to do with love”

and ends with

“Love is more dangerous than its reputation”

These are the words of an investigator talking about one of his cases that still haunts him.

A case that begins with a wife discovering that her husband is cheating on her and then goes on to get complex beyond imagination.

The husband is desperate for the new life and the wife wants to hold on to her old life.

This thriller offers a deadly mix of infidelity, passion, blackmail, hatred, revenge and murder.

When the story gets rolling, the very first scene is a crucial one and then we see the backstory in a flashback.

That led me to wonder, if the revelation is where the film starts, where is it going to lead us?

Well.... The answer to this comes after many twists and turns, one of which was majorly unexpected.

The narrative style adds a lot to the suspense. Performances grow on you and out of the two central leads, I found Sonja's performance very layered and apt.

Towards the climax, as we proceed through the twists, you might find a couple of loopholes that require some amount of suspension of disbelief as far as the criminal investigation goes.

Now you have a choice there. Either you nit-pick and let it mar your experience or just take it in your stride and enjoy the thrilling ride. I opted for the latter.

The film might not boast of a water-tight investigation but with its suspense factor, unexpected twists, setting, performances, pace and crisp run of 1 hr 45 min, is a good one time watch for thriller lovers.

Afghan Dreamers is Ali Fazal's Next Hollywood Project

The actor's upcoming film, Afghan Dreamers, is being directed by Bill Guttentag, a two-time Oscar winner. For his two short films, You Don't Have to Die and Twin Towers, Bill has received the esteemed Academy Award.

Afghan Dreamers will be shot over the course of 50 days, with the majority of the scenes taking place in Budapest and Morocco. The shoot just got underway in Morocco. The movie is based on a real-life initiative that Afghan tech entrepreneur Roya Mahboob founded in 2017 to support young women in developing their abilities in science and technology despite a strongly patriarchal environment in the nation from which they originate.

The film throws light on the chaotic, sometimes dangerous backdrop of the country's politics. The story tells the tale of the team of Afghan girls who traveled across the world and participated in competitions, garnered global media attention and even met leading politicians from across the globe. The role of Roya will be portrayed by Nikohl Boosheri, of The Bold Type fame.

Ali said, "Excited and humbled to be sharing notes and being directed by Bill, who has an impeccable body of work. Afghan Dreamers is a very important story to be told and I'm happy to be part of its cinematic retelling."

The film is being produced by Laura Overdeck, Samudrika Arora and Bill Guttentag.
